The Moʻolelo Hawai‘i of Davida Malo Volume 1: Ka ʻŌlelo Kumu
DAVIDA MALO, EDITED BY JEFFREY LYON

The Moʻolelo Hawaiʻi of Davida Malo Volume 2: Hawaiian Text and Translation
DAVIDA MALO, EDITED AND TRANSLATED BY CHARLES LANGLAS AND JEFFREY LYON, WITH A NEW BIOGRAPHICAL ESSAY BY NOELANI ARISTA

Davida Malo’s Moʻolelo Hawai‘i is the single most important description of pre-Christian Hawaiian culture. Malo, born in 1795, twenty-five years before the coming of Christianity to Hawai‘i, wrote about everything from traditional cosmology and accounts of ancestral chiefs to religion and government to traditional amusements. The heart of this two-volume work is a new, critically edited text of Malo’s original Hawaiian, including the manuscript known as the “Carter copy,” handwritten by him and two helpers in the decade before his death in 1853. Volume 1 provides images of the original text, side by side with the new edited text. Volume 2 presents the edited Hawaiian text side by side with a new annotated English translation.

Malo’s text has been edited at two levels. First, the Hawaiian has been edited through a careful comparison of all the extant manuscripts, attempting to restore Malo’s original text, with explanations of the editing choices given in the footnotes. Second, the orthography of the Hawaiian text has been modernized to help today’s readers of Hawaiian by adding diacritical marks (‘okina and kahakō, or glottal stop and macron, respectively) and the punctuation has been revised to signal the end of clauses and sentences. The new English translation attempts to remain faithful to the edited Hawaiian text while avoiding awkwardness in the English.

Both volumes contain substantial introductions. The introduction to Volume 1 (in Hawaiian) discusses the manuscripts of Malo’s text and their history. The introduction to Volume 2 contains two essays that provide context to help the reader understand Malo’s Moʻolelo Hawai‘i. “Understanding Malo’s Moʻolelo Hawai‘i” describes the nature of Malo’s work, showing that it is the result of his dual Hawaiian and Western education. “The Writing of the Moʻolelo Hawai‘i” discusses how the Carter copy was written and preserved, its relationship to other versions of the text, and Malo’s plan for the work as a whole. The introduction is followed by a new biography of Malo by Kanaka Maoli historian Noelani Arista, “Davida Malo, a Hawaiian Life,” describing his life as a chiefly counselor and Hawaiian intellectual.

Manu, the Boy Who Loved Birds
CAREN LOEBEL-FRIED

Manu’ōō, a young Hawaiian boy, is on a quest. He must know—why was he named after an extinct native forest bird? As Manu discovers more about the ‘Ō‘ō Bird, he starts dreaming about the disappearing forests and native birds in Hawai‘i. Will he ever see a native Hawaiian bird? Are the ‘Ō‘ō birds really gone? After a surprise family visit to Hawai‘i Island, Manu finally understands the meaning of his name and how he can help the native birds of Hawai‘i.

The story is followed by an afterword with in depth information about forest birds of Hawai‘i, featherwork in old Hawai‘i, a glossary, and list of things to do that make a difference. Illustrated with accurately depicted, eye-catching, full-color block prints incorporating natural science and culture in a whimsical way.

Manu, the Boy Who Loved Birds, is a story about extinction, conservation, and culture, told through a boy’s experience and curiosity. Readers follow Manu’s journey of discovery, and learn along with Manu about the extinct honey eater he was named after, his Hawaiian heritage, and the relationship between animals and habitat. Told in a hopeful, empowering way, this story shows how we can all make a difference for wildlife.

Land of Plants in Motion
Japanese Botany and the World

THOMAS R. H. HAVENS

Land of Plants in Motion is the first in any language to examine two companion stories: (1) the rise of an East Asian floristic zone in deep geological time, how the ancestors of many Japanese plants spread to eastern North America by 5 million years ago, and how the Japanese islands evolved an astonishing wealth of plant species since; and (2) the growth of Japanese botanical sciences, from focusing on herbal medicine and natural history in the Edo period (1600–1868) to developing modern plant biology and amateur botany since the Meiji period (1868–1912). Both paleoclimatological processes and modern commercial motives explain the movement of plants across time and around the world.

The majority of plant species regarded as “Japanese” trace their origins to western China and the eastern Himalaya but are so indigenized that they often seem native today. Early modern scientists in Japan drew on knowledge of Chinese herbal medicine but achieved distinctive insights into plant life commensurate with but separate from their European counterparts. Foreign doctors and plant collectors sent Japanese species abroad in the nineteenth century for scientific study and to adorn ornamental gardens. Scholars at the University of Tokyo pioneered Japanese plant biology in the late nineteenth century, incorporating Western botanical methods but seeking a degree of difference in taxonomy while also gaining international legitimacy through publications in English. Makino Tomitarō and Minakata Kumagusu were extremely productive scholars who promoted public botany among amateur aficionados. Japan’s age of empire (1895–1945) was one less of exploration than plant collection, for both scientific and economic benefits. Displays of species from throughout the empire made Japan’s sphere of colonization and conquest visible at home. The infrastructure for research and instruction expanded slowly after World War Two: new laboratories, botanical gardens, university appointments, scholarly societies, and publications eventually allowed for great diversity of specialized study, especially with the growth of molecular biology in the 1970s and DNA research in the 1980s. Basic research was harmed by cuts in government funding during 2012–2017, but Japanese plant biologists continue to enjoy international esteem in many subfields of scholarship.
Hawaiian Language
Past, Present, Future

ALBERT J. SCHÜTZ

Hawaiian Language: Past, Present, Future presents aspects of Hawaiian and its history that are rarely treated in language classes. The major characters in this book make up a diverse cast: Dutch merchants, Captain Cook’s naturalist and philologist William Anderson, ‘Ōpūkaha‘ia (the inspiration for the Hawaiian Mission), the American lexicographer Noah Webster, philologists in New England, missionary-linguists and their Hawaiian consultants, and many minor players.

The account begins in prehistory, placing the probable origins of the ancestor of Polynesian languages in Mainland Asia. An evolving family tree reflects the linguistic changes that took place as these people moved east. The current versions are examined from a Hawaiian-centered point of view, comparing the sound system of the language with those of its major relatives in the Polynesian triangle. More recent historical topics begin with the first written samples of a Polynesian language in 1616, which led to the birth of the idea of a widespread language family.

The next topic is how the Hawaiian alphabet was developed. The first efforts suffered from having too many letters, a problem that was solved in 1826 through brilliant reasoning by its framers and their Hawaiian consultants. The opposite problem was that the alphabet didn’t have enough letters: analysts either couldn’t hear or misinterpreted the glottal stop and long vowels. The end product of the development of the alphabet—literacy—is more complicated than some statistics would have us believe. As for its success or failure, both points of view, from contemporary observers, are presented. Still, it cannot be denied that literacy had a tremendous and lasting effect on Hawaiian culture.

The last part of the book concentrates on the most-used Hawaiian reference works—dictionaries. It describes current projects that combine print and manuscript collections on a searchable website. These projects can include the growing body of manuscript and print material that is being made available through recent and ongoing research. As for the future, a proposed monolingual dictionary would allow users to avoid an English bridge to understanding, and move directly to a definition that includes Hawaiian cultural features and a Hawaiian worldview.
Branding Japanese Food
From Meibutsu to Washoku

KATARZYNA J. CWIERTKA WITH YASUHARA MIHO

Branding Japanese Food is the first book in English on the use of food for the purpose of place branding in Japan. At the center of the narrative is the 2013 inscription of “Washoku, traditional dietary cultures of the Japanese, notably for the celebration of New Year” on UNESCO’s Representative List of the Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity. The authors challenge the very definition of washoku as it was presented in the UNESCO nomination, and expose the multitude of contradictions and falsehoods used in the promotion of Japanese cuisine as part of the nation-branding agenda.

Cwiertka and Yasuhara argue that the manipulation of historical facts in the case of washoku is actually a continuation of similar practices employed for centuries in the branding foods as iconic markers of tourist attractions. They draw parallels with gastronomic meibutsu (famous products) and edible omiyage (souvenirs), which since the early modern period have been persistently marketed through questionable connections with historical personages and events. Today, meibutsu and omiyage play a central role in the travel experience in Japan and comprise a major category in the practices of gift exchange. Few seem to mind that the stories surrounding these foods are hardly ever factual, despite the fact that the stories, rather than the food itself, constitute the primary attraction. The practice itself is derived from the intellectual exercise of evoking specific associations and sentiments by referring to imaginary landscapes, known as utamakura or meisho. At first restricted to poetry, this exercise was expanded to the visual arts, and by the early modern period familiarity with specific locations and the culinary associations they evoked had become a fixed component of public collective knowledge.

The construction of the myths of meibutsu, omiyage, and washoku as described in this book not only enriches the understanding of Japanese culinary culture, but also highlights the dangers of tweaking of history for branding purposes, and the even greater danger posed by historians remaining silent in the face of this irreversible reshaping of the past into a consumable product for public enjoyment.

Chinese Buddhism
A Thematic History

CHÜN-FANG YÜ

What are the foundational scriptures and major schools for Chinese Buddhists? What divinities do they worship? What festivals do they celebrate? These are some of the basic questions addressed in this book, the first introduction to Chinese Buddhism written expressly for students and those interested in an accessible yet authoritative overview of the subject based on current scholarship.

After presenting the basic tenets of the Buddha's teachings and the Chinese religious traditions, the book focuses on topics essential for understanding Chinese Buddhism: major scriptures, worship of buddhas and bodhisattvas, rituals and festivals, the monastic order, Buddhist schools such as Tiantai and Chan, Buddhism and gender, and current trends—notably humanistic Buddhism in Taiwan and the resurgence of Buddhism in post-Mao China. Each chapter ends with discussion questions and suggestions for further reading. A convenient glossary of common terms, titles, and names is included.

Behold the Buddha
Religious Meanings of Japanese Buddhist Icons

JAMES C. DOBBINS

“Behold the Buddha is a marvel of elucidation and an invitation to discovery. Part introduction to Buddhism in Japan, handbook of Buddhist visual forms, and guide to premodern understandings of sacred images, it is also a reflection on how we see these revered objects today. Its focus is on Buddhist icons as salvific presences—not mere artworks—engaged by communities with scripture, ritual, and narrative and made efficacious through iconography, materiality, and aesthetic technique. With admirable clarity, it introduces us to the constellation of doctrinal concepts, devotional practices, cults, and teachers that animated such icons. . . . Eminently accessible, critically informed, and vividly illustrated, Behold the Buddha will energize classroom discussions on Japanese Buddhism and Buddhist art and enable museum and temple visitors alike to look closely and come away with richer understandings of Buddhism and its sacred images.” —Gregory P. A. Levine, University of California, Berkeley

“Behold the Buddha is an excellent handbook of religious imagery and icons for students, museumgoers, and travelers interested in exploring Japanese Buddhism in some detail. The work takes readers on a virtual pilgrimage of Japan's Buddhas and Bodhisattvas: Buddhist masters, relics, and calligraphy—all presented in their proper historical, philosophical, and ritual contexts—allowing them to decode the complex ways to behold these images as art, as symbols of Buddhist teachings and events, and as living entities deserving of worship.” —Asuka Sango, Carleton College

Images of the Buddha are everywhere—not just in temples but also in museums and homes and online—but what these images mean largely depends on the background and circumstance of those viewing them. In Behold the Buddha, James Dobbins invites readers to imagine how premodern Japanese Buddhists understood and experienced icons in temple settings long before the advent of museums and the internet. Although widely portrayed in the last century as visual emblems of great religious truths or as exquisite works of Asian art, Buddhist images were traditionally treated as the very embodiment of the Buddha, his palpable presence among people. Hence, Buddhists approached them as living entities in their own right—that is, as awakened icons with whom they could interact religiously.
Legacies of the Drunken Master
Politics of the Body in Hong Kong Kung Fu Comedy Films

LUKE WHITE

In 1978 the films Snake in the Eagle's Shadow and Drunken Master, both starring a young Jackie Chan, caused a stir in the Hong Kong cinema industry and changed the landscape of martial arts cinema. Mixing virtuoso displays of acrobatic kung fu with knockabout humor to huge box office success, they broke not only a wave of imitations, but also a much longer trend for kung fu comedies that continues to the present day.

Legacies of the Drunken Master—the first book-length analysis of kung fu comedy—interrogates the politics of the films and their representations of the performing body. It draws on an interdisciplinary engagement with popular culture and an interrogation of the critical literature on Hong Kong and martial arts cinema to offer original readings of key films. These readings pursue the genre in terms of its carnival aesthetic, the utopias of the body it envisions, its highly stylized depictions of violence, its images of masculinity, and the registers of its “hysterical” laughter.

The book's analyses are carried out amidst kung fu comedy's shifting historical contexts, including the aftermath of the 1960s radical youth movements, the rapidly globalizing colonial enclave of Hong Kong and the emerging consciousness of its 1997 handover to China, and the transnationalization of cinema audiences. It argues that through kung fu comedy's images of the body, the genre articulated in complex and often contradictory ways political realities relevant to late twentieth-century Hong Kong and the wider conditions of globalized capitalism. The kung fu comedy entwines us in a popular cultural history that stretches into the folk past and forward into utopian and dystopian possibilities.

Theoretically rich and critical, Legacies of the Drunken Master aims to be at the forefront of scholarship on martial arts cinema. It also addresses readers with a broader interest in Hong Kong culture and politics during the 1970s and 1980s, postcolonialism in East Asia, and action and comedy films in a global context—as well as those fascinated with the performing body in the martial arts.

Luke White is senior lecturer in visual culture and fine art at Middlesex University, London.
Moments of Silence
The Unforgetting of the October 6, 1976, Massacre in Bangkok

THONGCHAI WINICHAKUL

“After reading Moments of Silence, no one should ever again refuse scholars the right to fuse emotion with analysis in reflecting on tragic events they have witnessed. At once a riveting memoir, a careful scholarly assessment, a yearning for conversations never consummated, and an act of sustained political courage tempered with compassionate fairness, the book exposes the violence that the continuing silence about the events of 1976 has inflicted on the Thai body politic. That silence, the norms that sustain it, and the labile public memory those norms have shaped serve the unsmiling authoritarianism that still haunts the ‘land of smiles’ to this day.”

—Michael Herzfeld, Harvard University

“Thongchai Winichakul has done it again. Siam Mapped remains one of the most impressive books on Thailand’s past ever written, and his new one is just as good. Moments of Silence is also bracingly personal, for its author as a young activist was directly affected by the violence that convulsed Bangkok in 1976. An innovative blend of memoir and theoretically informed ruminations on memory, Moments of Silence has much to offer not just those concerned with Southeast Asia but also anyone interested in the myriad other settings, from Beijing and Burma to Cairo and Kent State, that have been sites of massacres, large or small, with complex and contested legacies.”

—Jeffrey Wasserstrom, author of Vigil: Hong Kong on the Brink

“It is very difficult for anyone belonging to the 1970s generations of Southeast Asian student activists to read and finish Moments of Silence. There is so much pain in this memoir of Thongchai Winichakul. Yet, somehow, he has been able to take a step back and analyze the 1976 massacre of his fellow students at the Thammasat University. With this book, Thailand’s ruling elites will not be able to hide the full story of that tragedy anymore.”

—Patricio N. Abinales, University of Hawai’i at Mānoa

The massacre on October 6, 1976, in Bangkok was brutal and violent, its savagery unprecedented in modern Thai history. Four decades later there has been no investigation into the atrocity; information remains limited, the truth unknown. Moments of Silence focuses on the silence that surrounds the massacre. Silence, the book argues, is not forgetting. Rather it signals an inability to forget or remember—or to articulate a socially meaningful memory. It is the “unforgetting,” the liminal domain between remembering and forgetting.
Reframing Disability in Manga
YOSHIKO OKUYAMA

“This important, groundbreaking work makes a strong case for manga as an effective medium for depicting the realities of living with a disability and educating the general public—not just manga fans—about it. My teaching would be enriched by the addition of manga that do a good job of representing disability, and this book gives me all the information I need to find and properly contextualize such works. Professor Okuyama’s book would also be a wonderfully useful resource on queer narrative and anti-normative discourse in Japan.” —Sharalyn Orbaugh, University of British Columbia

Reframing Disability in Manga analyzes popular Japanese manga published from the 1990s to the present that portray the everyday lives of adults and children with disabilities in an ableist society. It focuses on five representative conditions currently classified as shōgai (disabilities) in Japan—deafness, blindness, paraplegia, autism, and gender identity disorder—and explores the complexities and sociocultural issues surrounding each. Author Yoshiko Okuyama begins by looking at preindustrial understandings of difference in Japanese myths and legends before moving on to an overview of contemporary representations of disability in popular culture, uncovering sociohistorical attitudes toward the physically, neurologically, or intellectually marked Other. She critiques how characters with disabilities have been represented in mass media, which has reinforced ableism in society and negatively influenced our understanding of human diversity in the past.

Okuyama then presents fifteen case studies, each centered on a manga or manga series, that showcase how careful depictions of such characters as differently abled, rather than disabled or impaired, can influence cultural constructions of shōgai and promote social change. Informed by numerous interviews with manga authors and disability activists, Okuyama reveals positive messages of diversity embedded in manga and argues that greater awareness of disability in Japan in the last two decades is due in part to the popularity of these works, the accessibility of the medium, and the authentic stories they tell.

Scholars and students in disability studies will find this book an invaluable resource as well as those with interests in Japanese cultural and media studies in general and manga and queer narrative and anti-normative discourse in Japan in particular.

A Kamigata Anthology

Literature from Japan’s Metropolitan Centers, 1600–1750

EDITED BY SUMIE JONES AND ADAM L. KERN WITH KENJI WATANABE

“A Kamigata Anthology brings together a scintillating array of popular literature from the Kyoto-Osaka region during the early Edo period. Few readers will fail to be surprised by its range or to delight in the verve of the translations, every one of which is an illuminating joy.”
—Timon Screech, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London

“This long-awaited volume is full of lively translations that span an impressive variety of literary genres. The abundant use of images is particularly effective in bringing the works to life and demonstrating how narratives, drama, and poetry were consumed through an interplay of different media. It is a wonderful resource for not only academic specialists in premodern Japanese literature and history, but also anyone interested in Japanese popular culture, visual media, gender and sexuality, and the broader study of literary form and genre.”
—Michiko Suzuki, University of California, Davis

This is the first of a three-volume anthology of Edo- and Meiji-era urban literature that includes An Edo Anthology: Literature from Japan’s Mega-City, 1750–1850 and A Tokyo Anthology: Literature from Japan’s Modern Metropolis, 1850–1920. The present work focuses on the years in which bourgeois culture first emerged in Japan, telling the story of the rising commoner arts of Kamigata, or the “Upper Regions” of Kyoto and Osaka, which harkened back to Japan’s middle ages even as they rebelled against and competed with that earlier era. Both cities prided themselves on being models and trendsetters in all cultural matters, whether arts, crafts, books, or food. The volume also shows how elements of popular arts that germinated during this period ripened into the full-blown consumer culture of the late-Edo period.

The tendency to imagine Japan’s modernity as a creation of Western influence since the mid-nineteenth century is still strong, particularly outside Japan studies. A Kamigata Anthology challenges such assumptions by illustrating the flourishing phenomenon of Japan’s movement into its own modernity through a selection of the best examples from the period, including popular genres such as haikai poetry, handmade picture scrolls, travel guidebooks, kabuki and joruri plays, prose narratives of contemporary life, and jokes told by professional entertainers.

Arbiters of Patriotism
Right-Wing Scholars in Imperial Japan

JOHN PERSON

In the 1930s and 1940s Marxist academics and others interested in liberal political reform often faced virulent accusations of treason from nationalist critics. In Arbiters of Patriotism, John Person explores the lives of two of the most notorious right-wing intellectuals responsible for leading such attacks in prewar and wartime Japan: Minoda Muneki (1894–1946) and Mitsui Kōshi (1883–1953) of the Genri Nippon (Japan Principle) Society.

As fervent proponents of Japanism, the ethno-nationalist ideology of Imperial Japan, Minoda and Mitsui appointed themselves judges of correct nationalist expression. They built careers out of publishing polemics condemning Marxist and progressive academics and writers, thereby ruining dozens of livelihoods. Person traces Japanism’s rise to literary and philosophical developments in the late-Meiji (1868–1912) and Taisho (1912–1926) eras, when vitalist theories championed emotion and volition over reason. Founding their ideas of nationalism on the amorphous regions of the human psyche, Japanists labeled liberalism and Marxism as misunderstandings of the national particularities of human experience.

For more than a decade, government agents and politicians used Minoda’s and Mitsui’s publications to remove their political enemies and advance their own agendas. But in time they came to regard both men and other nationalist intellectuals as potential thought criminals. Whether collaborating with the government to crush the voices of class struggle or becoming the targets of police surveillance themselves, Minoda and Mitsui came to embody the paradoxically hegemonic yet arbitrary nature of nationalist ideology in Imperial Japan. In this thorough examination of the Genri Nippon Society and its members, Arbiters of Patriotism provides a tightly argued and compelling account of the cosmopolitan roots and unstable networks of Japanese ethno-nationalism, as well as its self-destructive trajectory.

John Person is assistant professor of Japanese studies at the University at Albany, State University of New York.
Divorce in South Korea
Doing Gender and the Dynamics of Relationship Breakdown
YEAN-JU LEE

It may sound logical that individualistic attitudes boost divorce. This book argues otherwise. Conservative norms of specialized gender roles serve as the root cause of marital dissolution. Those expectations that prescribe what men should do and what women should do help break down marital relationships. Data from South Korea suggest that lingering norms of gendered roles can threaten married persons’ self-identity and hence their marriages during the period of rapid structural changes.

The existing literature predicting divorce does not conceptually distinguish between the process of relationship breakdown and the act of ending a marriage, implicitly but heavily focusing on the latter while obscuring the former. In contemporary societies, however, the social and economic cost of divorce is sufficiently low, i.e., stigma against divorce is minimal and economic survival after divorce is a nonissue, and leaving a marriage is no longer dictated by one’s being liberal or conservative or any particular characteristics. Thus, the right question to ask is not who leaves a marriage but why a marriage goes sour to begin with. Practically no previous study on divorce has exclusively theorized the process of relationship breakdown. Not conceptually separating the act of leaving a marriage, previous studies addressing the risk factors of divorce have been rather ambiguous about how marital relationships deteriorate enough to result in dissolution.

In Korea, a majority of divorces occur through mutual consent of the two spouses without any court procedure, but when one spouse files for divorce, the fault-based divorce litigation rules require the court to lay out the entire chronicle of relevant events occurring up to the legal action, often with the help of court investigators. As such, court rulings provide glimpses into the entire marital dynamics, including verbatim exchanges between the spouses. Lee argues that the typical process of relationship breakdown is related to married persons’ daily practices of verifying their gendered role identity.
Buddhist Tourism in Asia
EDITED BY COURTNEY BRUNTZ AND BROOKE SCHEDNECK

This innovative collaborative work—the first to focus on Buddhist tourism—explores how Buddhists, government organizations, business corporations, and individuals in Asia participate in re-imaginings of Buddhism through tourism. Contributors from religious studies, anthropology, and art history examine sacred places and religious monuments as they have been shaped and reshaped by socioeconomic and cultural trends in the region.

Following an introduction that offers the first theoretical understanding of tourism from a Buddhist studies’ perspective, early chapters discuss the ways Buddhists and non-Buddhists imagine concepts and places related to the religion. Case studies highlight Buddhist peace in India, Buddhist heavens and hells in Singapore, Thai temple space, and the future Buddha Maitreya in China. Buddhist tourism’s connections to the state, market, and new technologies are explored in chapters on Indian package tours for pilgrims, thematic Buddhist tourism in Cambodia, the technological innovations of Buddhist temples in China, and the promotion of pilgrimage sites in Japan. Contributors then situate the financial concerns of Chinese temples, speed dating in temples in Japan, and the diffuse and pervasive nature of Buddhism for tourism promotion in Ladakh, India.

How have tourist routes, groups, sites, and practices associated with Buddhism come to be possible and what are the effects? In what ways do travelers derive meaning from Buddhist places? How do Buddhist sites fortify national, cultural, or religious identities? The comparative research in South, Southeast, and East Asia presented here draws attention to the intertwining of the sacred and the financial and how local and national sites are situated within global networks. Together these findings generate a compelling comparative investigation of Buddhist spaces, identities, and practices.
Monastic Education in Korea
Teaching Monks about Buddhism in the Modern Age

URI KAPLAN

What do Buddhist monks learn about Buddhism? Which part of their enormous canonical and non-canonical literature do they choose to focus on as the required curriculum in their training, and what do they elect to leave out? The cultural depository of Buddhism includes some four thousand canonical texts, hundreds of other historical works, modern textbooks, oral traditions, and more recently, an increasingly growing body of online material. The sheer diversity of this mass of information makes the pedagogical choices of monastics worthy of close study.

Monastic Education in Korea is essentially a biography of the Korean Buddhist monastic curriculum over the past five centuries. Based on extensive ethnographic work and archival research in Korean monasteries, it illustrates how a particular premodern syllabus was reimagined in the twentieth century to become the sole national Korean monastic pedagogical program—only to be criticized and completely restructured in recent years. Through a detailed analysis of these modifications, the work demonstrates how Korean Buddhist reformers today tend to imitate the educational practices and canonize the textual totems of the contemporary international discipline of Buddhist studies, and how, by doing so, they ultimately transform the local Korean tradition from a particular brand of Chinese-centered scholastic Chan into the inclusive, pluralistic, Indian-focused Buddhism common in English-language introductions to the religion.

The book further examines the proliferation of diverse graduate schools for the sangha, as well as the creation of a novel examination system for all monastics. It reveals some of the realities of operating large monastic organizations in contemporary Asia and portrays a living, vibrant Buddhist community that is constantly negotiating with modern values and reformulating its core orthodoxies.
Refocusing Ethnographic Museums through Oceanic Lenses

PHILIPP SCHORCH WITH NOELLE M. K. Y. KAHANU, SEAN MALLON, CRISTIÁN MORENO PAKARATI, MARA MULROONEY, NINA TONGA, AND TY P. KĀWIKA TENGAN

“Refocusing Ethnographic Museums through Oceanic Lenses is distinctive for its layered coauthorship. It offers an important and potentially influential model, striking a balance between the single-authored volume and the edited collection, attractively bringing forward genuine multi-vocality, and the distinctive expertise of those bringing specific Indigenous perspectives/analyses/concepts, yet with a far more robust structure and coherence than the typical edited book.” —NICHOLAS THOMAS, MUSEUM OF ARCHAEOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY, UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE

Refocusing Ethnographic Museums through Oceanic Lenses offers a collaborative ethnographic investigation of Indigenous museum practices in three Pacific museums located at the corners of the so-called Polynesian triangle: Bernice Pauahi Bishop Museum, Hawai‘i; Museum of New Zealand Te Papa Tongarewa; and Museo Antropológico Padre Sebastián Englert, Rapa Nui. Since their inception, ethnographic museums have influenced academic and public imaginations of other cultural-geographic regions. The often resulting Euro-American-centric projection of anthropological imaginations has come under intense pressure, as seen in recent debates and conflicts around the Humboldt Forum in Berlin, Germany. At the same time, (post)colonial renegotiations in former European and American colonies, such as the cases in this book, have initiated dramatic changes to anthropological approaches through Indigenous museum practices. The book shapes a dialogue between both situations—Euro-American myopia and Oceanic perspectives—by offering historically informed, ethnographic insights into Indigenous museum practices grounded in Indigenous epistemologies, ontologies, and cosmologies. In doing so, the book employs Oceanic lenses that help to reframe Pacific collections in, and the production of public understandings through, ethnographic museums in Europe and the Americas. The coauthors collaboratively mobilize Oceanic eyes, bodies, and sovereignties, thus enacting an ethnographic kaleidoscopic process and effect aimed at refocusing ethnographic museums through Oceanic lenses.
In this convincing and provocative study, Rebecca Suter aims to complicate our understanding of world literature by examining the creative and critical deployment of cultural stereotypes in the early novels of Kazuo Ishiguro. "World literature" has come under increasing scrutiny in recent years: Aamir Mufti called it the result of "one-world thinking," the legacy of an imperial system of cultural mapping from a unified perspective. Suter views Ishiguro’s fiction as an important alternative to this paradigm. Born in Japan, raised in the United Kingdom, and translated into a broad range of languages, Ishiguro has throughout his career consciously used his multiple cultural positioning to produce texts that look at broad human concerns in a significantly different way. Through a close reading of his early narrative strategies, Suter explains how Ishiguro has been able to create a "two-world literature" that addresses universal human concerns and avoids the pitfalls of the single, Western-centric perspective of "one-world vision."

Setting his first two novels, A Pale View of Hills (1982) and An Artist of the Floating World (1986), in a Japan explicitly used as a metaphor enabled Ishiguro to parody and subvert Western stereotypes about Japan, and by extension challenge the universality of Western values. This subversion was amplified in his third novel, The Remains of the Day (1989), which is perfectly legible through both English and Japanese cultural paradigms. Building on this subversion of stereotypes, Ishiguro’s early work investigates the complex relationship between social conditioning and agency, showing how characters’ behavior is related to their cultural heritage but cannot be reduced to it. This approach lies at the core of the author’s compelling portrayal of human experience in more recent works, such as Never Let Me Go (2005) and The Buried Giant (2015), which earned Ishiguro a global audience and a Nobel Prize. Deprived of the easy explanations of one-world thinking, readers of Ishiguro’s two-world literature are forced to appreciate the complexity of the interrelation of individual and collective identity, personal and historical memory, and influence and agency to gain a more nuanced, "two-world appreciation" of human experience.
Balancing the Tides
Marine Practices in American Sāmoa

JOANNA POBLETE

“Poblete’s Balancing the Tides is remarkable for its focus on the impact of U.S. federal policies in American Sāmoa. Whether she is discussing federal minimum wage debates or examining federal fishing regulations, Poblete shows how Americans and Sāmoans alike shape and are shaped by the forceful and sometimes flexible nature of U.S. federal marine-related management in American Sāmoa.”
—Keith L. Camacho, UCLA

Balancing the Tides highlights the influence of marine practices and policies in the unincorporated territory of American Sāmoa on the local indigenous group, the American fishing industry, international seafood consumption, U.S. environmental programs, as well as global ecological and native concerns. JoAnna Poblete explains how U.S. federal fishing programs in the post–World War II period encouraged labor based out of American Sāmoa to catch and can one-third of all tuna for United States consumption until 2009. Labeled “Made in the USA,” this commodity was sometimes caught by non-U.S. regulated ships, produced under labor standards far below continental U.S. minimum wage and maximum work hours, and entered U.S. jurisdiction tax free.

Carefully analyzing the tensions between indigenous and U.S. federal government environmental goals and ecology programs, Poblete argues that initiatives that balanced western-based and native expectations for respectful community relationships and appropriate government programs fared better than those that did not acknowledge the positionality of all groups involved. Despite being under the direct authority of the United States, American Sāmoans have maintained a degree of local autonomy due to the Deeds of Cession signed with the U.S. Navy at the turn of the twentieth century that created shared indigenous and federal governance in the region.

Balancing the Tides demonstrates how western-style economics, policy-making, and knowledge building imposed by the U.S. federal government have been infused into the daily lives of American Sāmoans. This study connects the U.S.-American Sāmoa colonial relationship to global overfishing, world consumption patterns, the for-profit fishing industry, international environmental movements and studies, as well as native experiences and indigenous rights.

ALEC HOLCOMBE

“Alec Holcombe’s groundbreaking and superbly crafted manuscript—Mass Mobilization in the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, 1945–1960—is even broader in scope than its capacious title implies. The book is the first serious English-language history of the policy orientation of the Vietnamese communist state during the critical fifteen-year period following World War II.” —Peter B. Zinoman, University of California, Berkeley

In Mass Mobilization in the Democratic Republic of Vietnam, 1945–1960, Alec Holcombe explores the way the exigencies of war, the dreams of Marxist-Leninist ideology, and the pressures of the Cold War environment combined with pride and patriotism to drive totalitarian state formation in northern Vietnam. Immediately after its founding by Hồ Chí Minh in September 1945, the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (DRV) faced challenges from rival Vietnamese political organizations and from a France determined to rebuild her empire after the humiliations of WWII. Hồ was able to delay full-scale war with France for sixteen months in the northern half of the country. This allowed his Communist Party, under the cover of its Vietminh front organization, to neutralize domestic rivals and install the rough framework of an independent state.

The fledgling state became a weapon of war when the DRV and France came to blows in Hanoi during December 1946, the official beginning of the First Indochina War. With few economic resources, Hồ and his comrades needed to mobilize an enormous and free contribution in manpower and rice from DRV-controlled regions. By the early 1950s, the infusion of weapons from the United States, the Soviet Union, and China had turned the conflict into a “total war.” Hunger, exhaustion, and violence, along with the conflict’s growing political complexity, forced that the patriotic appeals be supplemented with coercion and terror. In late 1952, Hồ, under strong pressure from Stalin and Mao, carried out radical land reform in DRV-controlled areas of northern Vietnam. The regime’s 1954 victory over the French, the return of peace, and the division of the country into North and South did not slow this socialist transformation. Over the next six years, the DRV’s Communist leaders raced through land reform and agricultural collectivization with a relentless sense of urgency.
Tales of the Strange by a Korean Confucian Monk

Kŭmo sinhwa by Kim Sisŭp

TRANSLATED, ANNOTATED, AND WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY DENNIS WUERTHERN

One of the most important and celebrated works of premodern Korean prose fiction, Kŭmo sinhwa (New Tales of the Golden Turtle) is a collection of five tales of the strange artfully written in literary Chinese by Kim Sisŭp (1435–1493). Kim was a major intellectual and poet of the early Chosŏn dynasty (1392–1897), and this book is widely recognized as marking the beginning of classical fiction in Korea.

The present volume features an extensive study of Kim and the Kŭmo sinhwa, followed by a copiously annotated, complete English translation of the tales from the oldest extant edition. The translation captures the vivaciousness of the original, while the annotations reveal the work’s complexity, unraveling the deep and diverse intertextual connections between the Kŭmo sinhwa and preceding works of Chinese and Korean literature and philosophy. The Kŭmo sinhwa can thus be read and appreciated as a hybrid work that is both distinctly Korean and Sino-centric East Asian. A translator’s introduction discusses this hybridity in detail, as well as the unusual life and tumultuous times of Kim Sisŭp; the Kŭmo sinhwa’s creation and its translation and transformation in early modern Japan and twentieth-century (especially North) Korea and beyond; and its characteristics as a work of dissent.

Tales of the Strange by a Korean Confucian Monk will be welcomed by Korean and East Asian studies scholars and students, yet the body of the work—stories of strange affairs, fantastic realms, seductive ghosts, and majestic but eerie beings from the netherworld—will be enjoyed by academics and non-specialist readers alike.

God Is Samoan
Dialogues between Culture and Theology in the Pacific
MATT TOMLINSON

Christian theologians in the Pacific Islands see culture as the grounds on which one understands God. In this pathbreaking book, Matt Tomlinson engages in an anthropological conversation with the work of "contextual theologians," exploring how the combination of Pacific Islands' culture and Christianity shapes theological dialogues. Employing both scholarly research and ethnographic fieldwork, the author addresses a range of topics, from radical criticisms of biblical stories as inappropriate for Pacific audiences to celebrations of traditional gods such as Tagaloa as inherently Christian figures. This book presents a symphony of voices—engaged, critical, prophetic—from the contemporary Pacific's leading religious thinkers and suggests how their work articulates with broad social transformations in the region.

Each chapter in this book focuses on a distinct type of culturally driven theological dialogue. One type is between readers and texts, in which biblical scholars suggest new ways of reading, and even rewriting, the Bible so it becomes more meaningful in local terms. A second kind concerns the state of the church and society. For example, feminist theologians and those calling for "prophetic" action on social problems propose new conversations about how people in Oceania should navigate difficult times. A third kind of discussion revolves around identity, emphasizing what makes Oceania unique and culturally coherent. A fourth addresses the problems of climate change and environmental degradation to sacred lands by encouraging "eco-theological" awareness and interconnection. Finally, many contextual theologians engage with the work of other disciplines—prominently, anthropology—as they develop new discourse on God, people, and the future of Oceania.

Contextual theology allows people in Oceania to speak with God and fellow humans through the idiom of culture in a distinctly Pacific way. Tomlinson concludes, however, that the most fruitful topic of dialogue might not be culture, but rather the nature of dialogue itself. Written in an accessible, engaging style and presenting innovative findings, this book will interest students and scholars of anthropology, world religion, theology, globalization, and Pacific studies.
Displaced Lives
Fiction, Poetry, Memoirs, and Plays from Four Continents

EDITED BY FRANK STEWART AND GUEST EDITORS ALOK BHALLA AND MING DI

Human displacement is an old phenomenon; however, the dislocation of people in the twenty-first century has been unprecedented. At the end of 2019, over 260 million people were living outside their countries of birth. Some are forced to relocate—by violence, wars, hunger, persecution, and other causes—and some are voluntary migrants. A single term cannot define who they are or why they are on the move.

For those uprooted by force, the psychological and spiritual loss of homeland can be devastating. The millions who are mentally uprooted—because of war-induced PTSD, addiction, and aging—can suffer similar displacement and trauma.

Through outstanding fiction, poetry, memoir, and drama, the authors in Displaced Lives vividly depict the responses and emotions of ordinary people to displacement, a devastating and widespread crisis of our time.

Authors are from Bangladesh, Canada, Cuba, China, Germany, India, Ireland, Iran, Israel, Macedonia, Mexico, the Netherlands, Pakistan, the Philippines, Romania, Russia, South Africa, Spain, and the U.S.

Ambassadors in Arms
The Story of Hawaii’s 100th Battalion

THOMAS D. MURPHY
REPRINTED WITH A NEW FOREWORD BY FRANKLIN ODO

Hawaii’s 100th Infantry Battalion Separate was the first U.S. Army combat unit composed of Americans of Japanese ancestry. Its original members had been inducted into the Army before Japanese planes swept down on Pearl Harbor, December 7, 1941. How the loyalty of these soldiers was questioned by other Americans, then put to the test, and finally proved beyond doubt on the battlefields of Europe is the subject of this book.

Sometimes called the Purple Heart Battalion because of its casualty lists, the 100th established a record in Italy and France which made it one of the most decorated units in the history of the U.S. Army. Describing the Italian campaign General Mark W. Clark wrote: “I should mention here that a bright spot in this period was the performance of the 100th Battalion . . . it fought magnificently. . . . These Nisei troops seemed to be very conscious of the fact that they had an opportunity to prove the loyalty of many thousands of Americans of Japanese ancestry and they willingly paid a high price to achieve that goal. I was proud to have them in the Fifth Army.”

While the book is primarily about the young AJAs, there is another group of men who should be remembered. After Pearl Harbor, when thousands were clamoring for wholesale evacuation and internment of all Japanese Americans, a few individuals refused to doubt “because it would belittle the value of our American institutions.” Speaking of one of these men of faith, the editor of Honolulu newspaper wrote, “We were at the crossroads in that terrible December and it was largely due to (his) courage and influence that Hawaii took the right turn instead of the wrong. . . . The entire community and the nation owe him a debt of gratitude for his part in persuading us that we were justified in trying out the democratic ideals we had professed.”

Ambassadors in Arms, then, is a story not only of loyalty and courage, but of faith.
Islamizing Intimacies
Youth, Sexuality, and Gender in Contemporary Indonesia

NANCY J. SMITH-HEFNER

“Nancy Smith-Hefner’s much anticipated volume provides rich empirical data and incisive analyses of gender, sexuality, courtship, and marriage among youth in Indonesia, the world’s most populous Muslim-majority nation. Drawing on long-term ethnographic research, Islamizing Intimacies sheds valuable light on the ways in which processes of religious transformation and modernity inform the self-understandings, agency, and everyday interactions of Indonesians as ethical and productive citizen-subjects in a vibrant, forward-looking Muslim nation. Readers seeking an ethnographically well-grounded and theoretically sophisticated treatment of the relationship between ethical subject formation and socio-religious change that is relevant both to the Muslim world and far beyond will definitely welcome—and learn much from—this fascinating book.” —Michael G. Peletz, Emory University

China in the World
An Anthropology of Confucius Institutes, Soft Power, and Globalization

JENNIFER HUBBERT

“Jennifer Hubbert’s fascinating book casts a critical lens on China’s most important yet controversial project for cultivating soft power. Eschewing simplistic arguments about assumed censorship and threats to liberal democracy, her rich ethnographic study of the Confucius Institute program shows what actually happens in the classroom and how cultural knowledge about China is produced and consumed. In the process, Hubbert invites us to question the concept of free speech and rethink fundamental Western assumptions about modernity and globalisation. China in the World is essential reading for anyone interested in understanding contemporary US-China relations, cultural diplomacy, and the anthropology of policy.” —Cris Shore, Goldsmiths University of London
Tide and Current
Fishponds of Hawai‘i, Revised Edition

CAROL ARAKI WYBAN

“Tide and Current is a remarkable statement in an age in which we tend to look askance at the cold, objective facts of science; in which entertainment too often substitutes for learning; in which support for daily life from a benevolent government is looked upon as a right; and in which citizens of Hawai‘i seek an identity in which past and present will enrich each other... [I]t leaves the reader with an enormous appreciation of an intricate system which for centuries provided subsistence to a people who were completely dependent on the land and sea around them.” —E. Alison Kay, The Hawaiian Journal of History

Maritime Ryukyu, 1050-1650
GREGORY SMITS

Why do Ryukyu’s official histories locate the origins of its early dynastic founders in Iheya and Izena, small islands located northwest of Okinawa? Why did the Ming court extend favorable trade terms to Ryukyuans? What was the nature of Okinawa’s enigmatic principalities, Sannan, Chûzan, and Hokuzan? And how did the Ryukyu islands become united under a single ruler? Was this Ryukyuan state an empire, why did it go to war with the powerful Japanese domain of Satsuma in 1609, and what actually happened during that war? Answers to these and other key questions concerning early Ryukyuan history can be found in this bold reappraisal by a leading authority on the subject.

Soka Gakkai’s Human Revolution
The Rise of a Mimetic Nation in Modern Japan
LEVI MCLAUGHLIN

“McLaughlin’s book offers a supremely readable and enlightening account of the social and institutional dynamics within Soka Gakkai in present-day Japan. . . . [His] book catches Soka Gakkai at a critical juncture, and it will no doubt remain a classical witness account of this historical moment.” — Contemporary Japan

“The book’s detailed examination of the Soka Gakkai’s novels, The Human Revolution and The New Human Revolution, put the book in dialogue with contemporary trends in Religious Studies, such as attention to text, narrative, scripture, and processes of canon formation.” — Reading Religion
Citing China
Politics, Postmodernism, and World Cinema

GINA MARCHETTI

Citing China offers a framework for examining cinematic influence as a dynamic and multidirectional process. It is carefully researched, theoretically sophisticated, and animated by detailed and historically nuanced studies of individual films, making clear just how much a part of global film culture today’s China is. The book makes important contributions to debates in transnational film studies, postmodern versus modernist aesthetics and politics, and Asian as well as European art cinema.

Land, Power, and the Sacred
The Estate System in Medieval Japan

EDITED BY JANET R. GOODWIN AND JOAN R. PIGGOTT

Land, Power, and the Sacred represents a significant expansion and revision of our knowledge of medieval Japanese estates by examining the system from three perspectives: the land itself; the power derived from and exerted over the land; and the religion institutions and individuals that were involved in landholding practices. A range of readers will welcome the primary source research and comparative perspectives it offers; those who do not specialize in Japanese medieval history but recognize the value of teaching the history of estates will find a chapter devoted to the topic invaluable.
Invincible and Righteous Outlaw
The Korean Hero Hong Gildong in Literature, History, and Culture
MINSOO KANG

In Invincible and Righteous Outlaw, the first book-length study of the novel in English, Minsoo Kang reveals that The Story of Hong Gildong was most likely written by an anonymous mid-nineteenth-century writer whose primary concern was appealing to the increasing number of readers in the late Joseon looking to be entertained. Following a detailed examination of the history and literary significance of the novel, Kang surveys the many afterlives of the hero Hong Gildong—who has appeared and reappeared in countless revisionist novels, films, television dramas, and comics, even the creation of a Hong Gildong theme park in South Korea. He shows how the story was altered, distorted, and reinvigorated during and after the Japanese colonial period in both the North and the South for political, social, and literary purposes. Kang makes it clear that such narratives have served mostly to distance readers from a better understanding of this classic work.

Food Safety after Fukushima
Scientific Citizenship and the Politics of Risk
NICOLAS STERNSDORFF-CISTERNA

“[T]his book is a beautifully written and easy to read account of the challenges Japanese society has faced by the radioactive contamination of food in the first three years after the Fukushima nuclear disaster. Nicolas Sternsdorff-Cisterna provides manifold insights into the perspectives of concerned consumers and farmers in post-Fukushima Japan, and introduces their strategies for consuming and producing safe food on an everyday base. Scholars and students of Japan and food safety, as well as the general public will benefit from the many examples and rich descriptions of individuals’ practices in a post-disaster society.” — Contemporary Japan
Familial Properties
Gender, State, and Society in Early Modern Vietnam, 1463–1778

NHUNG TUYET TRAN

“Drawing on largely untapped sources that highlight the voices of Vietnamese themselves, Familial Properties explores the roles of women as daughters, concubines, wives, mothers, and widows in the neo-Confucian order of early modern Vietnam. Its path-breaking approach illuminates the ways in which women at all levels of society were able to negotiate and at times challenge gender norms, despite their legal and sexual subordination and the state’s endorsement of male superiority. Richly detailed, analytically insightful, and clearly written, Familial Properties represents a major contribution to Southeast Asian history and to the global field of gender studies.”

Mirroring the Past
The Writing and Use of History in Imperial China

ON-CHO NG AND Q. EDWARD WANG

Examining both the worlds of official and unofficial historiography, the authors lay bare the ingenious ways in which Chinese scholars extracted truth from events and reveal how schemas and philosophies of history were constructed and espoused. They highlight the dynamic nature of Chinese historiography, revealing that historical works mapped the contours of Chinese civilization not for the sake of understanding history as disembodied and theoretical learning, but for the pragmatic purpose of guiding the world by mirroring the past in all its splendor and squalor.
Building a Heaven on Earth
Religion, Activism, and Protest in Japanese Occupied Korea

ALBERT L. PARK

“Albert Park’s Building A Heaven on Earth is a welcome addition to scholars’ intensifying call for a modern Korean historiography that moves beyond modernist- (including Marxist) and nationalist-centered approaches. . . . Anyone working on modernity and religion, Korean religions in colonial Korea, and modern Korean (intellectual) history will benefit tremendously from Park’s tour de force.” — Journal of Korean Religions

Becoming One
Religion, Development, and Environmentalism in a Japanese NGO in Myanmar

CHIKA WATANABE

“This is one of the most rewarding and thought-provoking works on Japan I have read in a long time. Readers are immersed in the intellectual and activist world of a pioneering Japanese international NGO and confronted with fascinating questions about religion, national identity, and the humanistic desire to make the world a better place. An outstanding achievement.” — Simon Avenell, author of Transnational Japan in the Global Environmental Movement
Coral and Concrete
Remembering Kwajalein Atoll between Japan, America, and the Marshall Islands

GREG DVORAK

“There is good argument for careful analyses of global ‘hotspots’ as exemplar places that disclose larger political, economic, military, and popular culture connections and Kwajalein Atoll is certainly one of these places. Clearly and evocatively, Dvorak deploys key metaphors of ‘coral’ and ‘concrete’ to represent historical accretions on the atoll, and also to symbolize his interest in smaller personal, and larger global stories.” —Lamont Lindstrom, The University of Tulsa

Pacific Futures
Past and Present

EDITED BY WARWICK ANDERSON, MIRANDA JOHNSON, AND BARBARA BROOKES

“This book both enriches and challenges the field of global history by returning—from a variety of archival and theoretical concerns—to questions about the very nature of history that have variously engaged scholars such as Greg Dening, Reinhart Koselleck, and Marshall Sahlins. The rich essays collected here will have much to say to anyone contemplating the status of the discipline of history today.” —Dipesh Chakrabarty, The University of Chicago
The Journal of James Macrae
Botanist at the Sandwich Islands, 1825
EDITED BY BRIAN RICHARDSON

This volume is a transcription of the original manuscript journal kept by Scottish botanist James Macrae when he traveled with Lord Byron on HMS Blonde during its 1824–1825 voyage from England to the Hawaiian Islands. A primary purpose of the expedition was to return the bodies of King Kamehameha II (Liholiho) and Queen Kamāmalu, both of whom had died of measles during a diplomatic visit to Britain. Macrae also brought plants to Hawai‘i and made observations wherever he sailed. After almost three months in the islands, the ship returned to Britain and Macrae’s journal was given to the Royal Horticultural Society. Extracts were published in 1922, but a complete transcription of the journal from the time Macrae spent in Hawai‘i has not previously been available.

The Diaries of Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii, 1885–1900
EDITED AND WITH ANNOTATIONS BY DAVID W. FORBES

The diaries of Queen Liliuokalani are the closest record we have of the personal thoughts and actions of the person who was at the center of the final days of the Hawaiian monarchy. Furthermore, the Queen's diaries are the only existing sustained journals kept by a Hawaiian monarch. Although some of the diaries have been accessible in public repositories, little of this important collection has been published. The Diaries of Queen Liliuokalani, 1885–1900 compiles these writings for the first time, and is edited and annotated by historian David W. Forbes. It is illustrated with images of significant people noted in the diaries, and facsimiles of her letters and journals.

Partners in Change

A Biographical Encyclopedia of American Protestant Missionaries in Hawai‘i and their Hawaiian and Tahitian Colleagues, 1820–1900

DAVID W. FORBES, RALPH THOMAS KAM, THOMAS A. WOODS

Partners in Change: A Biographical Encyclopedia of American Protestant Missionaries in Hawai‘i and their Hawaiian and Tahitian Colleagues, 1820–1900, is a reference work for individuals involved in the Mission work. It includes the Hawaiians and Tahitians who worked with the Mission, ABCFM missionaries, and London Missionary Society missionaries. The expanded nature of Partners in Change will be a boon to researchers in its expanded scope from the 1969 Missionary Album. The fact that it uses a modified Chicago Manual of Style system provides an accessible form of documentation for casual readers, yet maintains a clear pathway for scholars to check and verify our statements/quotations and to build upon them if they choose to do so.

Kōkua Aku, Kōkua Mai

Chiefs, Missionaries, and Five Transformations of the Hawaiian Kingdom

EDITED BY THOMAS A. WOODS

Kōkua Aku, Kōkua Mai: Chiefs, Missionaries, and Five Transformations of the Hawaiian Kingdom is a series of essays which develop the HMH site theme: Collaboration between Native Hawaiians and the American Protestant missionaries resulted in, among other things, the introduction of Christianity, the development of a written Hawaiian language and establishment of schools that resulted in widespread literacy, the promulgation of the concept of constitutional government, the combination of Hawaiian with Western medicine, and the evolution of a new and distinctive musical tradition with harmony and choral singing. The authors of the essays in Kōkua Aku, Kōkua Mai are among the leading scholars in their essay topics.

Oral Literature, Gender, and Precedence in East Timor

Metaphysics in Narrative

DAVID HICKS

Decades of war, social upheaval and political change have not lessened the enduring interest of East Timorese in their oral traditions. Although new forms of expression are emerging, the corpus of Timorese oral narrative largely retains an underlying metaphysical unity, and continues to express indigenous notions about gender and precedence. Until now, Timorese oral narratives have not been subjected to rigorous scholarly analysis. In this masterly study, the veteran Timor scholar David Hicks draws upon over 50 years of fieldwork and publishing to discusses the tropes within Timorese metaphysical thought and literature. No other work has discussed these before nor indeed attempted to discern patterns of thought in Timorese narratives.

Taiwan Literature
Special Issue on Tu Kuo-ch’ing
EDITED BY KUO-CH’ING TU AND TERENCE RUSSELL

This special issue is dedicated to the life work of the journal’s founder and main editor, Tu Kuo-ch’ing. Apart from his important role in the promotion of Taiwan literature, Professor Tu is a celebrated and much-studied poet who has been one of the most significant poets in the Modernist poetry movement in Taiwan since the 1960s. However, very little of his work is available to English language readers. This is unfortunate for both historic and aesthetic reasons. Therefore, it is our intention with this special issue to provide a representative selection of Tu’s poetic oeuvre, as well as a number of studies of his verse in English translation.

In the Buddha’s Light
The Temples of Luang Prabang

PHOTOGRAPHS BY JACK PARSONS
ESSAY BY JOANNA HURLEY
FOREWORD BY JOAN HALIFAX

This engaging memoir takes the reader on a journey into the heart of one of Southeast Asia’s most beautiful and enchanting small cities. Lush, exotic—and full of contradictions—Luang Prabang sits at the confluence of the Mekong and Nam Khan Rivers in Laos. Formerly the capital of the ancient royal kingdom of Lane Xang, “home of 1,000 elephants,” it is now a World Heritage site that hosts nearly half a million visitors a year. It is also home to more than 35 Buddhist temples, and the center of spiritual life in a communist country that is the most-bombed place in history courtesy of the U.S. military during the Vietnam War. The American authors found the Lao people charming and gracious in spite of this atrocity, and more than willing to welcome them into their homes and magnificent temples.

Full Potential
Daoist Wisdom Meets Western Psychology
LIVIA KOHN

Blending modern psychology and Daoist wisdom into a recipe for the fully actualized child, this book shows how human beings form an integral part of nature and the greater universe. Partaking in Dao to the fullest, they can experience a sense of well-being, inner harmony, and overarching excellence. Ancient Chinese texts describe this realization of our full potential in terms of free and easy wandering or skillful spontaneity. Western psychologists similarly speak of personal fulfillment in work and play. This book offers a unique presentation: none other pulls the same level of information together, let alone present it in such a vibrant and engaging way.

The Literati Path to Immortality
The Alchemical Teachings of Lu Xixing
ILIA MOZIAS

The Literati Path explores the life and teachings of the Ming author and alchemist Lu Xixing (1520–1601). It begins by examining his biography, religious community, alchemical doctrine, and methods of practice. Next, it expounds the cosmological doctrines of internal alchemy and outlines yin and yang as the basis of the immortal elixir. Then it describes how the practice serves to overcome destiny, modeling techniques on biological gestation. Shedding fascinating new light on the religious life of Ming literati and providing first access to a unique take on internal alchemy in late imperial China, The Literati Path to Immortality is a must for anyone interested in traditional Chinese religion and culture!

Mataatua Wharenui
Te Whare i Hoki Mai
HIRINI MEAD, LAYNE HARVEY, POUROTO NGAROPO, TE ONEHOU PHILLIS

Mataatua is the most travelled wharenui (meeting house) in New Zealand. Built to reunite the Ngāti Awa tribe after confiscation of land and devastation of the people in the 1860s, it was appropriated by government after being taken to a Sydney exhibition then to London and back to Otago Museum. Damaged and altered, Mataatua was regained by Ngāti Awa after more than 130 years away. This book details the history of Mataatua, its restoration and reopening and the fight of the people to regain their sovereignty and again have Mataatua as a living wharenui in the care of its people.

MARTIN VILLANUEVA

“What's compelling about the essays that Martin writes is his insistence on asking questions rather than giving answers. It's an enviable maturity to be willing to put oneself in a position where it's the grasping for meaning and wisdom that are meaningful. There's no easy offering of insights, but rather each piece, so rich and varied in subject matter, brings us to new inquiries and forces us to grapple, to truly essay.”

Nursing in Asia and the Pacific Islands regions is a rapidly growing group of professionals and include the fastest growing minority group in America. Yet one of the greatest challenges is finding information about these groups in publications which examine their health, disparities, immigration and acculturation challenges, health literacy, health education needs, policy implications, and responses to varied interventions in acute care and community settings. Asian/Pacific Island Nursing Journal assists researchers, educators, and practitioners in meeting these important challenges.
